have been working with artists to facilitate the design and decoration of each pony. The artists working on the sculptures have either been sourced through Dudley Performing Arts or through the venues themselves. Each pony is dynamically different from the next - all sorts of themes and materials have been used to bring the sculptures to life. The 30th pony called 'Tag Me' is

The original design for the pony was by Birmingham based sculptor Farina Stewart who created the design in willow before covering it in fibre glass and taking it to GRP Building Products, Kingswinford for casts to be taken. 29 of the ponies have been designed and decorated by Dudley schools and colleges who through new eyes. 30 ponies have been placed along a walking trail around Brierley Hill, starting at St Michael's Church, Moor Street car park.

The project is a public art event to provide residents and visitors with artistic enjoyment whilst looking at the area in a new and innovative way. The aim of the trail is to get people out and about over the summer, to enjoy the different takes on one artistic theme and to see the area

Inspired by 'King Bladud's Pigs' sculpture trail in Bath 2008, the Brierley Hill Arts & Culture Development Group and Dudley Performing Arts have launched a similar trail in and around Brierley Hill from 24 July to 25 September 2010. This is a huge event for Brierley Hill and encourages visitors to take a fresh look at the area, encompassing usual and unusual venues and locations - inspiring exploration!
